MESSAGES FROM THE CHAIR AND EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

We are delighted to present Australian Golf Foundation's first Impact Report.

While it has been a challenging time for the Australian community because of the impact of the pandemic and other natural disasters, we are very pleased to be able to report that through the generosity of our supporters, the Foundation has made a real difference in its early years.

Our principal fundraising project, the Junior Girls Scholarship Program, demonstrates the very significant impact philanthropy can play in golf.

Through the program, young girls from all around Australia have the opportunity to pursue their golfing journey in a fun, inclusive and engaging environment and we recognise and thank Bonnie Boezeman AO and the many Australian golf clubs involved in the program for their passionate support and advocacy of this initiative.

We are also nurturing another project, the Give Back Program, building on commitments from participants in Golf Australia's High Performance Program.

In partnership with Golf Australia, we are thrilled that Minjee Lee and Lucas Herbert through the Give Back

Program have made gifts of significant amounts via the Foundation to support the Golf Australia High Performance Program so our developing players may have the best opportunity to achieve their potential.

We are also extremely grateful to Cameron Smith for his continuing support through the Foundation of his existing scholarship program which provides Queensland based recipients who qualify with the opportunity to travel to the United States and stay and train with him to experience what is involved in preparing for tournament play at the highest level.

We acknowledge as well The Kinghorn Foundation's extremely generous and continuing support of the Golf Australia Rookie Program providing invaluable financial assistance to those emerging golfers who choose to transition from amateur to professional golf. We look forward to complementing the Kinghorn Foundation's leadership as the Give Back Program develops.

The Foundation's journey is only starting but we are incredibly motivated by what can be achieved in so many ways to enrich people's lives through the game of golf.

We thank all our donors, partners and supporters for their invaluable generosity.

AUSTRALIAN GOLF FOUNDATION

We have a fantastic platform to grow philanthropy in the game.

Australian Golf is extremely fortunate to already have a culture of giving that we can build upon.

$74.8M was raised in Australia in donations across all sports in the 2022 financial year via the Australian Sports Foundation (ASF), with golf being the number three sport at $6.8M.

The ASF predicts that by 2032, philanthropic investment in sport will grow to $300M per annum. Golf can be at the forefront of this opportunity!

The Junior Girls Scholarship Program has demonstrated the enormous potential and impact of giving, with over $830,000 projected to be raised in just over 2 years and during a pandemic. These funds meant 909 girls received scholarships across the country in the first 2 years of the program, with over a further 1,000 scholarships to be granted in 2023.

In addition, $375,000 has been channelled to date through the Foundation from the Golf Australia Give Back Program and the Cameron Smith Scholarship Program.

This is a wonderful start to the AGF's objective of elevating our culture of giving and unlocking Australian Golf's enormous philanthropic potential for the benefit of the game and the community.

AUSTRALIAN GOLF FOUNDATION

SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT IMPACT STORY

SUMMER DELLOW

Only ever knowing golf as a sport played by dads, standing at just 105 centimetres at age five, Summer Dellow was eager to buck this trend and get on-course.

6

AUSTRALIAN GOLF FOUNDATION

For Summer Dellow, the Australian Golf Foundation has provided an opportunity to connect with girls her age – a key strategy to retaining girls in golf.

Golf has traditionally been a lonely sport for girls, especially teenage girls. The cry from many young golfers “I am the only girl!”, echoes true across fairways throughout Australian golf clubs.

At such a critical time in their young lives when girls are seeking acceptance and connection with their peers, being able to ‘see’ other girls playing is a key retention indicator.

The Junior Girls Golf Scholarship Program brings girls together to nurture a love for the game and foster friendships.

Twelve-year-old Summer Dellow of Darwin Golf Club is one such girl. Thanks to the Australian Golf Foundation, Summer has made friends with other girls playing the game and therefore increased her likelihood of staying within the sport.

“Before the scholarship, I felt left out, especially when I went to tournaments, as there were few girls. And of the girls there, all of them were older,” she explained.

Beginning her golf journey at the age of five, Summer has loved the sport from the moment she began – with or without girls. However, one of her favourite aspects of the scholarship program has been, “meeting other girls my age who play.” And it seems Summer is not alone. 2021 scholarship recipients rated ‘meeting other girls my own age’ as one of the most important aspects of the program.

Four years after starting golf, at age nine, Summer started playing competitions. This early and quick advancement was due to the support and encouragement of her father, Paul, an avid golfer.

When Summer joined the scholarship program at the start of 2021, she was 11 years old and had a 37 handicap. Her goal was to drop this to 29 by December and she achieved this by August, thanks to the ongoing professional tuition the scholarship program provides. A further 10 months on and Summer, now aged 12 plays to a 16 handicap.

An impressive feat says PGA Professional, Robert Dehne of Darwin Golf Club. “To be so young and still quite tiny in stature, it is amazing what Summer is achieving both on and off the golf course.”

In addition to the opportunities to meet other girls who play, as well as the weekly professional tuition over the course of the year, the scholarship participants are also developing essential life skills.

All these golf related experiences help to build confidence, self-esteem, etiquette, respect, patience and skills to communicate and socialise with not only peers, but club members of all ages.

“Summer’s confidence blossomed as she was the first to obtain her handicap and became a great role model for the other girls. She is extremely driven and is out practicing four to five times per week, and is proud of her achievements,” says an equally proud Dehne.

7

AUSTRALIAN GOLF FOUNDATION

Summer's father, Paul Dellow is grateful for the positive role models the intergenerational friendships has created for his daughter.

"Through golf, Summer has made some fantastic friends her age, but it is also great to see the relationships she is developing with older members at the club. I have enjoyed watching her develop the confidence and capability to now play with other adults in club competitions, not just myself."

Summer's growth continues to flourish. She was recently selected to represent Darwin Golf Club in women's pennant and is also a part of Golf NT's Junior Emerging Talent program (JET) alongside fellow scholarship recipient, Allegra Di Somma.

"Now with Allegra and the other three girls from my scholarship year, I have girls my age to play and compete with," she said. "This makes the long travel to places where I don't know, more bearable."

"My aim is to drop to a 13 handicap by the end of the year, and by the start of next year shoot below my personal best of 85 off the stick."

"Thank you to the Australian Golf Foundation for my scholarship year. I improved my golf a lot through coaching and have made some really great friends."

JUNIOR GIRLS SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

DONOR IMPACT STORY

THE KINGHORN FOUNDATION SUPPORTING AUSTRALIAN GOLF'S ROOKIE PLAYERS

Through the foresight and generosity of The Kinghorn Foundation our talented golfers through the Golf Australia Rookie Program are able to apply for scholarships to enable them to successfully transition from amateur to professional golf.

Established in 2009, approximately 60 athletes have been funded through the program which has expanded to allow more young professional athletes to be able to receive levels of support that would have previously been unachievable.

"We are extremely grateful to The Kinghorn Foundation for their wonderful support of the program which has enabled it to expand and provide invaluable financial assistance to our emerging female and male athletes when they become touring professionals."

"Turning professional is a big step for any player and through the generous support of The Kinghorn Foundation we are able to provide financial assistance to our athletes for their training and preparation and competition expenses to support them in becoming the best they can be."

"A number of Australia's outstanding young athletes have received rookie scholarships including Minjee Lee, Cam Smith, Hannah Green, Lucas Herbert, Cam Davis, Stephanie Kyriacou and Jed Morgan, which is proof of how impactful the program is."

Brad James, General Manager – High Performance, Golf Australia

GIVE BACK PROGRAM

Initiated by Golf Australia and run in conjunction with the Australian Golf Foundation, the AGF is fully behind the Give Back Program which is a world-first for golf whereby athletes in Golf Australia's high performance program return a part of the cost of their development while they were amateur players, by making gifts through the AGF once they turn professional and reach particular thresholds in their professional career.

Australia has some outstanding young players including world top 10 players in Cameron Smith and Minjee Lee who both won majors in 2022 and came through the Golf Australia high performance program. The Give Back Program is seen as an important way of helping to continue developing our future champions.

A number of players have already contributed to the initiative through the Australian Golf Foundation including Cameron Smith who chose to make a voluntary contribution via his personal scholarship program in 2020. Minjee Lee also has made two separate contributions, and Lucas Herbert, a winner both in Europe and in the United States, fulfilled his commitment – well into six figures – in one payment.

"I'm absolutely rapt to be part of this," said Herbert when he made his contribution this year. "I had no hesitation when I heard about it. I've been very lucky to have benefited from the state and national programs when I was an amateur and a young professional out of the Bendigo area, and I'm forever grateful for that. Having made my way to the PGA Tour, this is the least I can do to help, and I love the fact that the money will go straight back into the same programs that helped make me who I am today."

"I am so glad to have been able to make a donation through my scholarship to provide two promising Aussie amateurs with the opportunity to stay and train with me for a week at my home base in the USA, and that I can pass on what I have learnt, to help them become the best players they can be," said Smith.

MINJEE LEE

EVIAN CHAMPIONSHIP WINNER 2021
US WOMEN'S OPEN WINNER 2022

19

AUSTRALIAN GOLF FOUNDATION

All the things I got out of Golf Australia's High Performance pathway really helped me to this point in my career, so I'm really happy to be able to give back to the kids who are in the program right now.

WHAT IT MEANS TO GIVE BACK

She's a home-grown superstar who started out as a little girl with a dream. And Minjee Lee has followed in the footsteps of Karrie Webb in learning to give back to her sport'.

When Minjee Lee won the US Women's Open at Pine Needles in North Carolina in June 2022, she picked up the biggest first-prize cheque in the history of women's golf, $US1.8 million.

Not so obvious was that her triumph in the most prestigious tournament in the women's game was a full-circle turn.

Minjee Lee, who grew up in Perth as the daughter of South Korean immigrants, dabbled in piano but turned to golf when she ventured to a clinic at a local facility, is a home-grown superstar, the winner of two major championships already aged 25.

She is also a person with a willingness to give back to her sport.

In this, she learned from Karrie Webb, the seven-time major winner and golfing legend who has spent more than a decade mentoring young female players who followed her as part of the Webb Scholarship.

Minjee Lee was a beneficiary as a Webb Scholarship holder when she was an amateur so when she reached the pinnacle of her sport, she knew that she wanted to look behind her as well.

In 2021 and 2022 she gladly contributed some of her earnings through the unique Give Back Program.

"I think it's a really special thing to do," Lee said when she made her first donation in 2021. "All the things I got out of Golf Australia's High Performance pathway really helped me to this point in my career, so I'm really happy to be able to give back to the kids who are in the program right now."

Lee is also a living breathing example of what the Australian Golf Foundation Junior Girls Scholarship Program is about, providing opportunities for young female golfers with dreams and aspirations.

Minjee Lee was 10 years old when she began playing golf. Her mother Clara was working as a golf instructor, and both Minjee and her younger brother Min Woo (also as it happens, now a very talented touring professional himself) spent a lot of time at the driving range with their parents.

Minjee quickly became adept at the game and at 12, started the first of many hours of tuition and hard work with the renowned Perth coach Ritchie Smith at Royal Fremantle Golf Club in Perth.

Her point of difference was her work ethic. "I'm a big believer that those who work the hardest, get the most," said Smith.

"We hashtag 'most deserving,' which means you put in the most effort, you're the best player, and you're the best person. That means saying thank you to the volunteers, saying thank you to your caddies and speaking nicely to everyone."

Minjee Lee was soon winning championships at WA state level, then the United States Junior Amateur in 2012. She became Australian Amateur champion in 2013 and repeated that victory in 2014, the same year that, aged just 17, she defeated a full field of professionals to win the Vic Open at 13th Beach by an astonishing six shots. At that point, she had reached a No. 1 world ranking for amateur players.

In 2015 she turned professional, graduated to the LPGA Tour in America, and won her first championship as a professional, quickly leaping into the top echelon of women golfers, triumphing in a string of tournaments.

In 2021 she won her first official major crown, the Evian Championship in France, with a withering final round and in 2022, she put the exclamation mark on her career with her victory at Pine Needles in the US Open, and reached a No. 2 world ranking.

Only four Australian women – Karrie Webb, Jan Stephenson, Hannah Green and Lee – have won women's major championships.

Minjee Lee is already an all-time great of Australian golf, with much more to come.

To think that it all started with a little girl venturing out to some golf clinics in Perth all those years ago ...
